

Otago's Changing Seas

Looking after our Coastline

Sunday 7th March 2010, 1-5pm

New Zealand Marine Studies Centre, Otago Peninsula, Dunedin

Otago has treasures on its doorstep – our local seas provide nourishment, recreation and employment. How can we protect and preserve our coast for the health, wealth and happiness of future generations? This half-day symposium is an opportunity for discussion and information-sharing. Scientific, conservation and community experts will share up-to-date information about the marine environment, current research and conservation issues, and different perspectives on its use. All are welcome, and there is no charge to attend.

GO GREEN: Free transport will be provided from Dunedin. Coaches leave the railway station at 12 noon, and return from Portobello at 5:30pm.

To register your interest, please phone the NZ Marine Studies Centre on 03 479 5826 or email your details to marine-studies@otago.ac.nz. Further information can be found at www.marine.ac.nz.
